SKILLS AND INTERESTS

A sports-enthusiast, my love of rowing, netball, swimming and waterpolo has taught me the importance of teamwork, and the value of clear and honest communication. I have sharpened these communications skills, in high school and more recently at university, by participating in forum discussions and public-speaking competitions. Through sport, community initiatives and my family's involvement in the church, I have learned to connect with a wide range of people from different backgrounds. This experience, along with my strong ethic and even temperament, wins me the trust and confidence of peers, colleagues and supervisors.
